Salute Susan Boyle: 2009 Sensation

The frumpy middle-aged spinster enjoyed no prior build-up. Her singing ability alone earned her fame on British TV.

She didn't win the talent contest, but she won millions of hearts and fans all over the world. What can we learn from her success?

Lesson 1: When an opportunity comes along – take it. If there's a competition, enter it.

Lesson 2: Years of private practise will pay off in the fullness of time. Your day will come.

Lesson 3: Have faith in your own ability to deliver the goods. You can do it!

Lesson 4: It took six months for Susan to rocket from obscurity to fame. Be careful when too much fame comes too quickly.

Lesson 5: When fame and fortune does come, enjoy it. Adjust your life accordingly.

Susan's music CD 'I Dreamed A Dream' has become the fastest selling album in music history with 701,000 sales in the first week!

What will 2010 bring you? For good things to happen you will need to do something.

Photographer Dee Stewart excelled with her Digital Photography course Assignment 5 when she created a still life using potatoes, broccoli, broccolini, beans, cauliflower, rice, etc shaped like a river flowing under a driftwood bridge. "I enjoy creating things" she said. This photograph raises the standard for other students who see the same assignment brief: make a still life using natural grown objects.

Dee used her imagination and took her time. She did more than just photograph a stack of stuff. She created something, first in her mind, then she built it and photographed it. This superb shot is the result. See it in colour on the SDB.

Dee Stewart is available for advertising photography assignments, telephone 0277717809.
