Loose lips sunk Gordon's ship

Many stories have come out of the British election but none is more intriguing than that of Mrs Gillian Duffy.

In summary, Mrs Duffy went out to buy a loaf of bread and – in the process – changed the course of British history!

She stumbled into Gordon Brown's walkabout entourage in Dumfries. She asked the PM about EU immigration, which he answered. But back in the 'privacy' of his car he let fly a barrage of ill-considered remarks. The careless man's microphone was still connected to Sky TV. His comments about "that bigoted woman" etc went public. His and Labour's popularity sank.

Labour lost the election. Britain will probably switch from FPP to MMP voting, something like New Zealand has.

All that happened when Mrs Duffy went out to buy bread.

Please be careful who you talk to when you're out shopping. You could change the course of history.

Tuihana Walker of Tauranga was asked by the Ngati Ranginui Iwi Society to create their quarterly newsletter. She has interviewed Awanui Reeder, lead singer for the Nesian Mystiks, and Ria Hall, lead singer for Hope Road. They are both producing new music albums funded by Te Mangai Paho.

"My passion is print media, particularly human interest stories that celebrate Maori development and achievements in all areas. Another is Maori broadcasting.

"I've been involved in post-production at Maori Television and working with Maori media to encourage Maori creative people.

"My thesis is on how Maori broadcasting has helped fashion Maori culture.

"Good luck to those studying Journalism. Getting your certificate is well worth all the hard yakka."
